Construction

From community-building infrastructure projects to cutting-edge manufacturing facilities as well as affordable housing that brings families and communities together, Hanwha is helping to enrich the lives of people around the globe.

Based on its accumulated know-how, Hanwha is leaping forward as a comprehensive construction company with projects such as building Bismayah New City, the largest urban development in Iraq's modern history, which is expected to include 100,000 residential units.

Hanwha is a leader in metropolitan developments that combine culture, leisure, business, and commercial facilities. In early 2021, it completed the Gwanggyo Development Project in Suwon, South Korea. Including more than just residential facilities, the project is a comprehensive urban experience featuring department stores, hotels, aquariums, and multipurpose buildings.

The company continues to cement itself as a leader in eco-friendly construction through the development of building-integrated photovoltaic (BIPV) systems and zero-emission solar housing (ZESH) technology. Hanwha's Seoul headquarters received the Council on Tall Buildings and Urban Habitat (CTBUH) Renovation Award in 2021 for its sustainable development. The building's façade features 275 m<sup>2</sup> of embedded Q.PEAK solar modules which produce clean solar energy to offset its dependence on more traditional sources of electricity.

Through its recognized capabilities, Hanwha will continue carrying out responsible business practices and contributing to social development in the global construction market.
